“What’s in your Backyard?”

Imagine seeking a solution to reach your life dream. You don’t know where to begin so you go out of your way to connect with a recommended person who lives miles away.

Yes! You believe going outside of your area will surely provide access to a valuable or great resource. However; what you feel is valuable, because it is not immediately within your reach, may be a false perception of value.

Now imagine as you search here and there using your valuable time, funds, and energy a sudden mental spark prompts you to share your desires with a friend or family member. After a brief conversation, you suddenly realize that what you needed was right here, right under your nose, right in your backyard !

Your resource is often disguised as a family member, community leader, or special friend.

You may find it hard to believe that great people or great resources may be those you have previously established a strong relationship or history.

Keep in mind, success stories have revealed again and again that we often go out of our way to seek greatness when it is within our reach. Right in your backyard.

Taking that second look into your backyard may provide you with a pleasant surprise as well as a valuable resource that will benefit you as well as others who share a common goal.

In closing, I encourage you today to take a moment to revisit your backyard and discover valuable resources that are comparable to those that require you to go out of your way spending your valuable time and funds in order to achieve similar results.

Keep in mind we have been reminded over time that “everything you need is just one person away” and may be right under your nose in your backyard!

Jumpstart your brain; jumpstart your life!
